SUGGESTIVE READING

You will bear it said that such and such a magazine prints suggestive stories, meaning that they are corrupting ideas in an attractive dress. But there is a suggestiveness also of quite a different sort—the suggestiveness that quickens the reader's sense of duty, stimulates ambition, gives courage to face adversity, fortifies against yielding easily to temptation. It is this better kind of suggestiveness that you will find on every page of The Youth's Companion. Which of those two kinds of suggestiveness would you wish to have exert an influence in your family life? The 52 issues of 1922 will be crowded with serial stories, short stories, editorials, poetry, facts and fun. Subscribe now and receive:

MAYOR HILAN, OF NEW YORK, SWEEP INTO CHAIR AGAIN

Quickly Relieved By Short Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

New York, November 9.—Mayor John P. Hylan was re-elected yesterday by the largest plurality ever given a mayorally candidate in this city.

The vote, with 328 districts out of 2,700 in the city missing, was Hylan, 666,707; Henry A. Curran, Republican, 295,082; Charles L. Craig, 295,082; and Jacob Panken, Socialist, 75,733. If Hylan's ratio of gain is maintained in the missing districts, his plurality will be about 413,000.

Mayor Hylan swept into office with him the Democratic candidates for city controller, president of the board of aldermen, and the two borough presidents.

HYLAN DELIGHTED

"I am delighted over the outcome," Mayor Hylan said, "as the returns received indicate my election by a tremendous plurality. This shows the confidence the citizens placed in me and that they took no stock in the stories told about me."

Mayor Hylan, in a statement late last night, pledged that his future course would be one to confirm the people's faith in him. The greater part of the statement was a criticism of certain New York newspapers which opposed him. They had used a studied course to discredit him and his administration for the past four years, he charged, to the detriment of the city's good name and business interests. The mayor expressed the hope that the citizens of these newspapers would be educated by the result.

The following mayors were elected in the cities:

Buffalo—Frank X. Schwab, Republican.

Rochester—Clarence C. Zandt, Republican.

PRESS OPINION

Dr. Clark and the Agrarian Movement

(Toronto Saturday Night)

That the best kind of peace and order in the recent election of Dr. Michael Clark, the gifted member of the Western Canadian agrarian political movement. While every effort may be made to minimize the significance of his election, the impression left on the minds of the public is bound to be effective. More than any other politician in the West, probably, Dr. Clark has long been highly respected for his unadorned sincerity of purpose in adhering to his political principles, whether agreeing with him or not. For many years his faith in what to him was an ideal has remained unchanged, irrespective of how it might effect his own career.

It had been anticipated that Dr. Clark would be one of the chief leaders in the farmers' "Progressive" movement, but after becoming familiar with the inner workings of the machine, he has changed his mind. He has even declined to become a candidate, largely, it would appear, because of his desire to bring a mere political puppet, controlled by the "power behind the throne," Mr. Wood. The fact that he has declined to retain his own code of idealism in regard to public service.

Dr. Clark does not agree with Mr. Wood in thinking he has discovered a panacea for all political ills, and something new in group government, which is as old as the hills. "True Liberals fought it," Dr. Clark has said, "and Canada still is the same. Under restricted franchise and as people rightly struggling to be free. The house of lords, the Family Compact, the Manufacturers' associations, and the junkers and militarists of Germany are not the less class selfishness and therefore doomed to die, because it is suddenly exposed in Farmer and Labor parties."

Clark, for many years, it would be impossible for me to turn my back on my past and the right in this election."

The judgment of Dr. Clark suggests—and having been in close touch with the United Farmers of Alberta for many years, no one is in a better position to judge—many of the ideas advanced by a few of the officials aiming at control of the agrarian political movement are not only impractical, but reactions. They talk about democracy, while at the same time seeking to keep the independence of prospective public representatives, presumably bound to that organization with the powers behind the throne obviously wish to be able to manipulate the elected members at will like so many marionettes.

ROD AND GUN FOR NOVEMBER

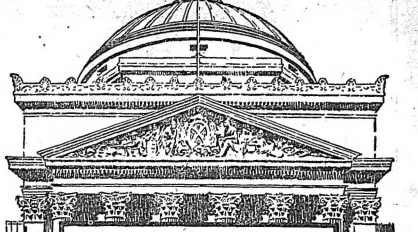

The November issue of Rod and Gun in Canada will delight the sportsman for its combination with its splendid cover painting showing a picture of a fine hooked duck in natural colors.

Two very interesting stories and articles in this issue include a splendid description of the "Twenty-six" of ballistics and one and one-half ounces of number six.

Joseph Bernard's exploratory trips in the Arctic regions also appears in the November issue. For the trapper and lover of the outdoor life there is the Trapping department fully edited by M. E. Bailey, from material obtained on his own trappings. The usual descriptions of the various species of mammals appear in this issue.

You Should Know

The quality of this season's wheat is so far superior to that of last year, that there is no favorable comparison of last year's flour with the product of this season's crop. All mills had trouble last season, which was largely due to the class of wheat available. Our stock of Purity Flour is from this season's crop, and it makes better bread and lighter bread and, consequently, more bread.

About Discounts and Net Prices

We are prompted to talk about Net Prices by an extended conversation the other day with a man who insisted that he should get a discount of ten per cent, and then that he should get at least five per cent because he had the money to invest in our merchandise. It was made perfectly clear that his dollar was worth only one hundred cents at the Bank, and that we do not play any favorites.

In the old days of the Charge System, we gave a discount of ten per cent to the Clergy, and to Societies, etc., but under the Cash System all are equal, all cash is equal value, and the only variation is where wholesale prices are quoted on quantities and unbroken packages. The only fair way to make comparison is to take the Net Prices actually paid after discounts are allowed, and where no discounts are allowed.

We invite a careful consideration of our values.

Canadians, especially in British Columbia, are vitally interested in the disarmament conference. Through a strong feeling against Japanese immigration as an economic problem, because Japan works for low wages at fishing, gardening, and common labor, without sharing in the community, writes a British writer in the New York World.

Lethbridge police court fines during the month of October totaled $2000.

Proposals to be made by the United States delegation to the conference of limitation of armaments, apparently constituted the only suggestion prepared in advance as to ways and means of curtailing by any power of national security.

PAYABLE TO BEARER

By Franklin Weller, Calkins

Hammond met Allen, his father's partner, unexpectedly. Highball, Allen came out of the store as the stage halted to change horses before going into the mountains. He came to the stage, and Allen, "Hello, Ham!" "Hi, Allen!" "How'd you catch you here? While the stage has come into the store and do some business for your pa and me?" "Hammond knew that Jim Allen had been riding for several days looking for 'grass feeders'; that is, hogs that he wanted to fatten on the unusually large crop of acorns at the hill ranch of Walker & Allen. Much interested, the young man followed Allen to a dark hollowed out of the stone counters. There in his open manner the partner put his case.

So he had just had his first chance to get some grazers. A man who wanted to save his live stock from attachment under a mortgage was about to drive more than a hundred head of hogs to the nearest market. Allen had bargained for them, and the man, whose name was Bruner, was to have his money within four days.

As the partner was riding home for the money and for men for the drive he had fallen in with two fellows on the road, one of whom had told him where he could find more hogs and also men for drivers. Allen had no check book with him, and he knew that Hammond expected to start the day before for the Silverton High School, had waited for the stage, at Highland.

"We borrowed a blank check and paper here," he said. "My signature is O.K., but I'm a poor scribbler. You write the check and a note telling Bruner that I'll come for the hogs within a week. I didn't get Bruner's initials, and nobody here seems to know 'em; so you'd better write the check payable to the bearer. His post office box is 641. I'll give you a receipt for the money, and you'll master there to put your letter, with the proper initials, into Bruner's sack where I'll ride with him and a new driver to the man's box."

As Hammond was writing he heard a stranger telling Allen what were the best roads. The young man finished his business, and soon afterwards the stage, with two other drivers, took the road. At Pratt Hammond changed routes. The postmaster there told him that Bruner's initials were C. N. and put the letter into the man's private bag. Hammond took his seat with the new stage driver, and the two men who had got in at Highland again occupied the seat behind. The bottom of the coach under the seat was piled with United States mail sacks and sacks for roadside delivery. As the stage boy and one of the rear passengers spoke to the driver.

"You're a driver on this route, ain't ye?" The driver replied that he had been driving about three months. The passenger asked him if he knew Smith, that he had sold some horses at Highland; that he lived over the big divide on the right; and that he would ride on five miles farther and then get off and walk across.

As the two men became interested in their talk Smith leaned his elbows on the back of the front seat, and Hammond good-naturedly asked him to give him more room. The young man recognized Smith by name, and the man who had been in Allen's directions about his road, Smith and the driver talked steadily for some time, then both passengers got out, paid their fares and were left alone. After a time the driver turned to Hammond with a laugh.

"That fellow Smith," he said, "oughtn't I've never heard of him. I guess he's a kind of respectable cattle and horse thief in cahoots with other rascals. He and they round up mavericks and unbranded colts and drive 'em in on Smith's big range over there. Smith always does business correct, though, and carries a good bank account."

Suspicion seized upon Hammond. "We heard of Dakota Smith," he said. "Was that he?" "No question about it," replied the driver.

"You look in Bruner's sack for a letter I mailed to him at Pratt? It's got Walker & Allen's return mark."

"What was in your letter?" "A check for eighteen hundred dollars payable to the bearer of this note. The delivery man handed his rolls to Hammond, and out the Bruner bag came behind the seat and the man's map. He brought forth two letters and a paper; but the letter from Walker & Allen was gone.

The young ranchman turned pale. "Can they possibly cash that check?" "Just as easy," replied the driver. "As that sleep-dressed chap got your letter while Smith covered his perambulations. Smith's acquaintance at all the banks; and he'll introduce this man, claiming the fellow's sold stock. Walker & Allen and bought a little from him. They'll divvy, and later on Smith, as innocent as a lamb, will help hunt for the villain."

"Our bank is at Silverton," said Hammond; "I must get there quick!" "You can't get there in time," said the driver, "and 'bout twice that far round; no telephone or telegraph within reach. You can get across on horseback, and probably on time. I can help you, and I will."

After a mile of fast driving the stage stopped at a ranch. A man came out and listened to the story. Within an hour Hammond had a horse and a mount as that range afforded and had been told not to spare the animal in riding to Silverton. The driver had listened to minute directions how to reach the one valley road below First Smith's place. Silverton partner had four miles to walk, but they would

DISARMAMENT PROGRAMME

Washington, November 13

Delegates to the disarmament conference had not yet received a final report from the Secretary Hughes' blunt presentation yesterday of the proposal for immediate reduction of the fleets of Great Britain, the United States and Japan, and for a ten-year naval holiday.

The concrete terms of the United States plan laid before the opening session of the conference on limitation of armaments were still in the hands of the naval experts of the other two powers chiefly concerned. Pending their conclusions, no further steps were probable.

The spokesmen here for Britain and Japan made none but guarded comments on Mr. Hughes' suggestions. As far as they went, these statements were encouraging, and it was certain at least that no possibility of flat rejection of the plan existed. Without doubt, it will form the basis of reaching whatever conclusions the conference brings forth.

At the same time, the United States plan today began to stand out in its true proportions. Apparently, it resolved that a ten-year naval holiday that is projected, coupled with immediate heavy reduction of the three powers.

Beyond that it is a third equally blunt and direct suggestion for a continuing agreement to discuss the size of the fleets permanently. That is what Mr. Hughes' naval replacement plan really amounts to.

WHAT IT REALLY MEANS If the terms of the proposal are agreed to then the United States, Great Britain and Japan agree that their navies, three months after the making of this agreement shall consist of the following ships:

Capital Ships—United States—Maryland, California, Texas, Mississippi, New Mexico, Arizona, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Nevada, Texas, New York, North Dakota, Delaware.

Great Britain—Royal Sovereign, Royal Oak, Royal Arthur, Revenge, Queen Elizabeth, Warspite, Valiant, Barham, King George V, Centurion, Ajax, Hood, Renown, Repulse.

Japan—Nagato, Hanga, Ise, Yamashiro, Fuso, Settsu, Kirishima, Haruna, Hiei, Yama, etc.

U.S. eighteen. Great Britain, twenty-two. Japan, ten. Total tonnage: Great Britain, 664,450. Japan, 299,700.

Disposition of old and new construction: (1) Capital ships shall be disposed of in accordance with methods to be agreed upon.

Replacements: (2) For the tonnage basis for capital ship replacement under this proposal to be as follows: United States, 500,000 tons. Great Britain, 1,000,000 tons. Japan, 300,000 tons.

That there should be a naval holiday for ten years.

That the United States scrap every capital ship, and building, with a total tonnage of $45,000,000.

That Great Britain scrap nine capital ships built and building, for a tonnage of $11,370, also certain second-line ships, making a total British reduction of 593,375.

That Japan scrap seven capital ships and other ships for a total tonnage reduction of 448,925.

In other words that the powers take their first step from the "mad race" in naval armaments, by wiping out one full sweep six-tenths of their monster ships, with a total of 1,378,345 tons.

Thus, at the first fitting of the conference, President Harding has placed all his cards upon the table, and it is now up to the other nations to show theirs.

As the secretary of state outlined his proposals it was intensely interesting to note the effect upon the delegates. The Japanese, grouped together at the opposite end of the table, sat motionless, inflexible, inescapable. No word, no whisper, no gesture passed between them; not a sign to reveal what they thought. The Chinese were more outwardly moved. They leaned forward intent upon every word, listening almost with bated breath. The French, however, appeared less concerned. M. Briand, who with M. Viviani, sat at the right of the United States delegation, made no sign, while Viviani sat back with thumbs into his vest, apparently oblivious to what was being said. The British reacted more to the United States' statement's proposals. Mr. Balfour, who looks much older than when in Canada last, and a little tired, sat straight up in an unfeigned surprise; Lord Lee leaned forward with intense interest, and as Mr. Hughes announced the United States' willingness to sacrifice thirty of its capital ships, Lord Bessie swung around in his chair as though he disbelieved his own ears.

The house at Washington occurred on Thursday in senate amendments to the bill extending the life of the emergency tariff until it is supplemented by a permanent law. The measure now goes to the president.
